

FORMER RESIDENT HERE ENDS LIFE AT TRENTON HOME

William H. Laing, 50, Inhales Illuminating Gas In Kitchen

FAMILY AWAY AT TIME

Business Worry Believed The Cause for His Act

A former Bristol resident committed suicide yesterday by inhaling illuminating gas at his home in Trenton, N. J.
Dead:
William H. Laing, 50, of 50 McKinley avenue.

While members of his family were visiting friends in Frenchtown yesterday afternoon, Laing, a real estate agent, ended his life with gas fumes in the kitchen of his home, according to Trenton police.

No explanation was left for his act
but it is believed to have resulted from worry over business conditions.
Laing was found stretched out on the kitchen floor with gas flowing from five burners and the oven of the store. Both doors leading into the kitchen were locked and paper had been stuffed under the door and around the windows.

Discovering a strong odor of gas
emanating from the Laing home, Mrs.
Loretta Wycoff, a neighbor, of 46 Mc-Kinley avenue, peered into the kitchen
from her back porch and saw Laing lying on the floor.

Mrs. Wycoff and George Bohlinger, of 51 McKinley avenue, whose aid she enlisted, forced open the rear door and carried Laing into the yard. Police were notified and an ambulance was sent to the scene in charge of Officers
Welsh and Schuman and Chauffeur Cobine. Patrolman Elder assisted in attempting to revive the victim and in keeping back a large crowd that gathered on the lawn. Dr. C. C. Franklin, who had been summoned in the meantime, pronounced Laing dead.

Coroner Carl C. Whitney viewed the body and notified County Physician Charles H. Mitchell.

Laing, who had been a resident of Trenton for about 16 years, leaves his widow, Stella; a son, William; one brother, Dr. Edward J. Laing, and two sisters, Mrs. Irene L. Hanford and Mrs. Louise Fabian, all of Bristol.

5:30. There were swimming races under supervision of John Barrett and James Blanche, life-guards at the beach. The events were:

Swimming races for girls under 14 years, won by June Allman and Anne Ritter; swimming race for boys under 14, Hugh Eastburn, Walter Stewart and Jack Thompson; swimming race for girls over 14, won by Louise Lawrence, Katharine McGinley and Bernice Bruner; swimming race for boys over 14, won by Edmund Dugan, Edward Kelber and George Talbot.

Novelty race, Louise Lawrence and Katharine McGinley tie for first place,
and Hugh Eastburn; fancy diving exhibition was given by Louise Lawrence, Katharine McGinley, Frances Eastburn, Franklin Fine, Edward Kel-ber.

John Barrett, who has been giving instructions in swimming, gave an illustration of the progress made by one of his pupils after receiving four lessons.

Following the events, refreshments of sandwiches, iced tea and small cakes were served by the entertainment committee. Some members and guests also played bridge.

"Peg O' My Heart" Comes To Grand With Marion Davies

Marion Davies will be seen starting tonight at the Grand Theatre in "Peg O' My Heart," screened by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer-Cosmopolitan from the famous J. Hareley Manners play in which Laurette Taylor created the title role on the stage 21 years ago and broke attendance records on two continents.

As the little Irish girl who inherits an ancestral estate in England and falls in love with the young lawyer who arranged for her entrance into society, Miss Davies is considered to have given the finest performance of her entire career.

For the role Miss Davies adopted an Irish brogue, obtaining a charming and natural dialect from an old hotel doorman in Los Angeles whose Celtic accent she used to mimic. In the first part of the picture she appears in the typical "Peg" costume with her frowsy dog, Michael. Later she blossoms forth in creations designed for her by Adrian, noted film stylist.

A musical background adds charm
to "Peg O' My Heart," the picture featuring two new songs, "Sweetheart Darlin'," by Herbert Stothart and Gus
Kahn, and "I'll Remember," by Nacio
Herb Brown and Arthur Freed, as well as incidental music by Herbert Stothart. Onslow Stevens makes his debut as a leading man in this picture, after first winning screen attention as the playwright in "Once in a Lifetime."

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE IN PENNA. REACHES 2,004,877

Greater Safeguards Protect

gers

NEWS IN THE STATE

HARRISBURG, July 24.—(INS)—
The desire for an education has carried the enrollment in Pennsylvania's public schools over the two million mark. School attendance jumped from 1,911,731 in 1928 to 2,004,877 last year, the Department of Public Instruction
reports.

During the same period the average daily attendance increased more than seven per cent, showing that more than 1,700,000 students were at their desks daily. This gave the state a percentage attendance of 94.

Although enrollment figures for 1933
are not available, it is estimated that the 1932 record will be exceeded by 30,000 or 40,000.

HARRISBURG, July 22.—(INS)—
Greater safeguards to protect the lives of passengers on motor buses will become effective in Pennsylvania next January.

After the first of the year all passenger buses used for the transportation of school children or paying passengers must be equipped with safety glass in the doors, windshields and windows.

All motor vehicles assembled or manufactured for sale in Pennsylvania after January 1, 1935, must be equipped with similar safety glass.

WILLIAMSPORT, July 22.—(INS)—
Plans are going forward for the development of Pennsylvania's newest playground, the Bucktail State Park, created by an act of the 1933 Legislature.

Representatives from every city and town between Williamsport and Kane will join the newly-formed Bucktail Trail Association, organized to aid the State in acquiring the private lands within the park area and developing the recreational facilities later.

The new park, which is estimated to contain 100 square miles, will be the largest of Pennsylvania's several state parks. It extends from mountain rim to mountain rim in the narrow scenic valley between Lock Haven and Emporium. It is 75 miles long.

The bill setting aside the area as a state park was introduced in the last legislature by Senator Richard S.
Quigley, of Lock Haven.

ORGANIZE JOB GIVING CAMPAIGN

Washington, D. C., July 24.—The nation was organizing today behind the President's job giving campaign, while National Recovery Administration headquarters was rushing detailed instructions for every section.
Nearly every telegram in response to the appeal for support of the plan,
and for local organizations to be formed, asked for further instructions.
Aids of Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of the whole industrial recovery program, worked throughout the week-end detailing plans.

The campaign will be organized along state, regional and county lines but with state chairman named by governors of states. The plan follows the general set-up for war time drives.

The first report of an organization
under way is from Richmond, Virginia, which sent an advance group here today for further details so as to maintain the community start.

Advertising copy writers in New York, after a week-end studying the plan of the campaign, were planning a series of 40 newspaper advertisements complete layouts of which were promised within a few days. Volunteers, many of them veterans of the "4-minute speakers' unit" of Liberty Loan days, have rushed to offer their services in this new drive. Unlike war days, one speaker today can reach untold numbers of hearers through radio.
Johnson has asked the co-operation of stations throughout the country. Support of these stations already has been pledged, in some instances.

The advertising to be prepared will be offered to local communities, which will in turn ask public spirited underwriters for their use. There will be no government expenditure for advertising space.

RECEIVE LETTER IN KIDNAP PLOT

Oklahoma City, July 24.—A letter mailed in a "small Missouri town" and directing the family of Charles F.
Urschel, millionaire oil man who was kidnapped from his palatial home here Saturday night, to make certain contact in St. Louis, was reported to have been received here today. Federal authorities who had taken complete charge of the search for Urschel and his abductors, declined to comment on the report and refused to say whether they believed the note, if such was received, was genuine or the work of a crank.

Braved Atlantic Together

Photos show Captain James Mollison and his equally famous wife, Amy Johnson, with their trans-Atlantic plane, the Seafarer, in which they crashed in a swamp near the Bridgeport, Conn., airport, yesterday, but a short distance from their goal, New York.

MOLLISONS IN HOSPITAL GREATLY DISAPPOINTED

Couple Who Crashed in Connecticut Suffer Most From Heavy Hearts

BOTH BRAVED OCEAN

By James L. Kilgallen
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 24.—
Cheated of victory almost within sight of their goal, Capt. James A. Mollison and his wife, the former Amy Johnson, from hospital beds today strove
to hide their disappointment at the unsuccessful end of their projected Wales-New York non-stop flight and
"took it smiling."

It was a wan smile, however.

The noted British flying pair plainly were suffering more from heavy hearts than from slight hurts received when their "Seafarer" plane crashed in a swamp just outside the airport
here, wrecking their hopes for completion of the hop from Pendine, Wales,
to Floyd Bennett airport in New York.

Misfortune which dogged the steps of the young couple since first they planned the flight culminated in the wreck of the "Seafarer."

The famed flying pair had covered approximately 3,190 miles since leaving Pendine Sands at 6:59 a. m. E. D.
T. Saturday. Unsighted for nearly 30 hours, they had fought unfavorable winds over the North Atlantic to reach the Canadian maritime province and head down the coast.

Both were at the point of exhaustion. And their fuel supply was running low. They were sighted first over Nova Scotia, then in the vicinity of St. Johns, later at Bar Harbor, Me., and over New Haven.

Word reached the airport here that Capt. Mollison and his wife would probably land to replenish their fuel supply before pushing on to New York.

STATE POLICE PATROL AT THE BLUE MOON MILL

All Local Officers Relieved;
Some State Officers
Mounted

NO DISORDER REPORTED

CROYDON, July 24.—State Police
took charge of the policing of the Blue Moon Hosiery Mill, here, this morning.
All local officers were relieved of duty.
The detail of state police consisted of 12 men, four of whom were mounted under command of Lieut. Griffith.

At a conference held yesterday at the home of Sheriff Horace Gwiner, Doylestown, and attended by Captain Samuel W. Gerhart, commanding officer of Troop C, Penna. State Police;
John W. Edelman, and Raymond E.
Good, representatives of the Full Fashioned Hosiery Union, a message was received from Governor Pinchot stating that the state police would take charge of the situation here.

The police were sent, according to the message, "to prevent violence of any kind, and to protect the rights of property and person under the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pen-sylvania, and to enforce public order in the streets." Union officials agreed at the conference to limit the pickets
to 150 men at the Blue Moon plant, which was the scene of some disturbance last week, during a strike for union recognition.

The state police arrived at the Blue Moon plant early this morning, bringing their horses in a large motor truck. They quickly went into action, being fully armed for strike duty with riot sticks. They were stationed at advantageous points, and there was no disorder. Later during the morning as the crowds outside of the mill dispersed, a number of the state police were withdrawn from duty.

In a statement at the offices of the Blue Moon it was said that between 90 and 100 persons were working at the plant. When the strike was called there were approximately 385 employees.

The Blue Moon announced an increase in wages on Saturday ranging from 25 to 40 per cent and over.

At the Gray Line Hosiery plant at Edgington conditions were very quiet this morning, but the plant was not operating. There was some picketing, but no state police were on duty there.

TWO MEN LOSE LIVES IN RIVER HERE SEEKING RELIEF FROM INTENSE HEAT; BOTH BODIES RECOVERED BY GRAPPLERS

Peter McGee, Bristol, and Daniel Briel, Philadelphia, Were
the Victims — Grapple Over Four Hours for McGee's Body Before It Is Recovered

S KILLED; SCORE HURT

At least eight persons were killed and approximately a score were hurt, none seriously, in traffic accidents in Pennsylvania over the week-end. Six persons met death and 12 were injured in Western Pennsylvania. Two others were killed in the Philadelphia area, and Central Pennsylvania presented a practically clear slate with only seven injuries and no deaths reported.

A list of the accidents follows:
Philadelphia — John Farrell, Jr., died of injuries received in an automobile crash.

Allentown — Dorothy Todd, 5, Catasauqua, died in Allentown Hospital after being injured when she darted in front of a machine driven by Dorothy Wenner, of Fullertown.

Heat exhaustion caused one death, Joseph Barrish, 69, Philadelphia. Three persons, Peter McGee, 53, Bristol, and Daniel Briel, 25, Philadelphia, and Charles Hanson, 50, Philadelphia, a seaman, were drowned in the Delaware River.

FIVE DROWN IN ALLEGHENY RIVER

Drowning of five persons in the Allegheny River near Warren, climaxed the lengthening fatality toll in Pennsylvania over the week-end as thousands sought relief from the sweltering heat at rivers and beaches, a check-up by L. N. S. revealed today. One of the five who perished when a rowboat upset a short distance from shore, died a hero's death. He was Albert E.
Hultberg, 40, who plunged into the river and swam to where the four were struggling in the water. Just as he reached the scene Hultberg was seen to falter and disappear beneath the surface. He was drowned before aid could reach him.

CHURCH AT HULMEVILLE PLANS BLDG. DEDICATION

Four "Red Letter" Days Are Arranged For in September;
Dr. Witwer to Attend

YESTERDAY'S SERVICES

HULMEVILLE, July 24.—Two splendid services took place at Neshaminy
M. E. Church, here, yesterday, a missionary on furlough from the African Congo speaking in the morning, and special musical selections being presented in the evening by a children's orchestra.

The Rev. W. C. Boyer, who is spending some time in Emille, delivered the morning sermon, and incorporated in his talk some interesting details of the work being carried on by him and Mrs. Boyer at their stations in the "dark" continent. It was brought out in the message that during each of the past four years 200 have been baptized in the district in which they carry on their labors. Mrs. Boyer sang in the native language of the Congo section.

Last evening, Miss Margaret Schorsch, of Langhorne, and the children's orchestra which she directs, played several numbers. This musical organization has broadcast on a few occasions.

Plans have been made for the dedication exercises of the new Sunday School building, this to occur Sunday morning, September 17, at 11 o'clock.
The sermon and exercise of dedication will be by the superintendent of the North District, Philadelphia M. E. Conference, Dr. Albert M. Witwer. At 7:30 in the evening, the choir under direction of Miss Clara L. Hillick will present a sacred musical program.

Tuesday evening, September 19th,
will be known as Ladies' Aid Night, when that organization will have charge of a program; while on September 20th the Epworth League will arrange for a service; and on Thursday night the Sunday School will be in charge. It is expected there will be special speakers on each of these evenings, with musical numbers included in the programs.

Reading, July 24.—A poison that has baffled physicians and killed two children, seriously threatened the lives of four other members of the same family today. Physicians, unable to diagnose the ailment, pinned their hopes on an autopsy to obtain some cure.
When Little Betty Marie Weitzel, 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Weitzel, residents of Leit's Ridge, a hamlet near here, died yesterday, Dr.
W. J. Bassler, of Lessport, was summoned. He ordered the five other children, Roy, 6; Jeanette, 10; Charles, 12; Evelyn and Arthur, 2 year old twins, removed to the Reading Hospital.

Two men lost their lives seeking relief from the intense heat yesterday when a Bristol man was drowned
in the Delaware river here and a Philadelphia man met death while bathing in the Delaware river at Maple Beach.

Victims: Peter McGee, 53, brother of Superintendent of Public Safety
James L. McGee.

Daniel Briel, 25, 719 North Third street, Philadelphia.

Both bodies were recovered.
McGee went bathing alone in the river it is presumed although no one so far as it is known, saw him actually in the water. He was last seen alive at about 11 o'clock yesterday morning
walking about the Mill street wharf wearing a bathing suit. His clothing was found at the wharf and this led to the belief that he had been drowned
when he was not seen after a reasonable length of time. His disappearance was reported to his brother, Superintendent of Public Safety James L. Mc-Gee at about 5 o'clock and grappling was at once started, in an effort to locate the body. Grappling continued without success until about 9:30 last evening when the body was recovered opposite the freight dock, about 100 feet out from shore. It was wedged in a log.

The grappling crew which found the body was composed of Blanchard Powell, Francis Rogers, Edward McGrath,
all of Burlington, N. J.

Deputy Coroner W. Furman Young
was summoned and viewed the body.
It was removed to the morgue of the
W. I. Murphy Estate.

The deceased is survived by four brothers, James L. McGee, Patrick
McGee, Hugh McGee and Bernard Mc-Gee, all of Bristol; three sisters, Mrs.
Thomas Keating, South Langhorne;
Mrs. John Whelan, Burlington, N. J.; and Sister Mary DeLourdes, Corpus Christi Monastery, New York.

There was doubt about McGee being in the water until his body was found.
Various rumors circulated through a large crowd which gathered and one of these was to the effect that McGee had been invited to take a yacht ride by a group of friends.

From the position of the body when recovered it is presumed McGee suffered an attack of cramps.

Funeral will be held Wednesday at 10 a. m., with high mass at St. Mark's Church. Burial in St. Mark's Graveyard will be under direction of the
W. I. Murphy Estate.

While assisting the grappling crew
Powell cut the large toe of his right foot on a piece of glass, later being treated at Harriman Hospital.

Briel, who was single, was bathing
at Maple Beach amid a large company.
While engaged in playing with a beach ball, he went beyond his depth. Being unable to swim the young man quickly sank, and his body did not appear again on the surface.

For one hour and 20 minutes the body was grappled for, finally being recovered by Fred Herman, Theodore Roper, Mr. Amole. Efforts to resuscitate were futile.

The spot where the Philadelphian
went to his death was a short distance
off the beach, and the body was discovered 50 feet from shore.

Deputy Coroner W. Furman Young
viewed the body, and issued a certificate stating death was due to accidental drowning. The body was taken to the morgue of the H. S. Rue Estate, and later removed to Philadelphia.

Prisoner Who Wouldn't Give Name Is Quakertown Woman

QUAKERTOWN, July 24.—Identity of a young woman who has been serving time in the Camden County Jail,
N. J., and known to authorities only as Miss X or "Marian," has been determined. She has been identified as Kenneth A. Laubach, of this borough.
The young woman, charged with obtaining money under false pretense in a real estate deal involving two houses in Woodbury, N. J., was arrested four weeks ago, pleaded guilty, and has appeared most unconcerned since her incarceration.

"Marian," as she had asked officers to call her, was informed Saturday there was a visitor to see her. When she faced the young man she was greeted with the call of "Ruth." "The jig's up," she replied. The man who proved to be her husband, and "Marion" are said to be in "caboots," and Laubach is now charged with obtaining money under false pretense.

When the young woman refused to divulge her name when arrested, James Wren and Jules Derowski, detectives, started to work upon a "tip,"
and took Laubach into custody at Hudson and Federal streets, Philadelphia.

JAPAN AND AMERICA

Roy W. Howard, newspaper publisher, who has just returned from an extensive visit in the Orient during which he made a survey of conditions in Japan, believes that the United States should, without delay, build up its navy to full treaty strength.

Mr. Howard is not a militarist. His views as reflected through his chain of newspapers have bordered on pacifism. He has been a strong supporter of world peace and of proposals promising to promote this.

His advocacy of a strong navy, therefore, is significant. It doesn't mean that he believes there is immediate danger of war between the United States and Japan. It does mean he wants the country to be prepared to protect its interests.

"The last two years have demonstrated," he said in urging a treaty-strength navy, "that so far as the Far East is concerned, America's efforts to substitute reason for force in international disagreements were premature. This conclusion is inescapable, though there is no disgrace attached to the failure which, in the final analysis, resulted from Europe's failure to cooperate."

He said he found that Japanese leaders "are as sincerely desirous of peace as is America." Leaders are not always able to control conditions, though, and he saw a background of danger in Japan.

"The fact is that the Japanese public has become convinced that America is too penurious to fight," he said. "In that misconception lies real danger. The gravity of the situation is tempered only by the fact that it results from differing psychology, rather than from clashing fundamentals."

He found in Japan a belief that the United States was "turning toward pacifism in consequence of feminine suffrage," and that because of the public demand for tax reduction it "is facing military impotence."

This condition is one fraught with danger, especially since American and Japanese interests run so closely together at some points.

Japanese politicians, he said, would see no offense in America's building its fleet up to full treaty strength. They do not want war with the United States and they would regard this action as supplying "insurance against any unfortunate incident" which might be precipitated by short-sighted militarists.

Mr. Howard's observations are in line with those made by other observers. Japan plainly has indicated she has no intention of curtailing her navy under the limits of the London treaty. Moreover, she has demanded a greater ratio than that now permitted her. For the United States to allow its navy to remain in an inferior state, would be a big mistake.

A fool and his money are often parted before they meet.

Some men spend all their money to prove that they have it.

Among the poor that are always with us are poor magazine stories.

One reason why the "interests" get more from Congress is because they know what they want.

Echoes of the Past---

By Louise White Watson

Believing

Years ago, in our physical geography class, we were studying about the formation of coral islands. The book stated that coral is the hard skeleton of certain sea animals, working over a hundred feet below water surface, etc. We girls took the statement as given, but one of the boys, a regular doubting Thomas, exploded—"What? Working down there and building islands? Well, I'll never believe it till I see them at it!" At this, after an astonished gasp, we laughed heartily, yes, and the teacher joined us. It infuriated him and by means of heavy frowns and a furtive fist movement, we interpreted he was in a threatening mood, and we girls were not like the one in Whittier's poems, who apologized so sweetly, giving as her reason, "Because, you see, I love you." However, we walked in groups for a time as a protective measure.

The English Sparrow

It was brought to this country for protective measures but later the hand of man was turned against the little stranger and credit was given for the destruction of the bird. One woman soaked bread in an intoxicating liquor and when the birds dropped over in a stupor, she, with that well-known woman's weapon, the broom, went forth and day after day, presumably as her liquor lasted, and slew them. Perhaps an easy death, and I know many hands will be protestingly raised, when they are cited as friends to mankind. But believing in certain statements, demands proof. May one begin at this most auspicious moment when man has declared, the fight against the Japanese beetle is a losing one and soon there will be no section in the United States that has not suffered from this insect. Side by side with the sparrow, as listed as a nuisance, is the starling. One quote from a recent press article, "The State Board of Game Commissioners has been investigating and it certifies these two birds are useful helpers in the fight against destructive insects." It went on to state that four of the worst enemies of man in the insect line are the Japanese beetles, Mexican bean beetles, striped cucumber beetles and willow leaf beetles. In their investigations, they found that practically every stomach of the starlings and sparrows taken for investigation was literally gorged with these insects. Objections raised, they eat valuable seeds, but only before the beetles are ready for their festive board and the seeds are but entrance tolls that count but little when the sparrows and the starlings with their sisters and their cousins and their aunts attack the main dish with satisfying results to themselves and to man, were he to stop a moment and consider.

"Suburban Life"

Julian P. Lord, in an article, "Friendly Birds," in one of the issues of this periodical, strikes a responsive chord in the heart of "H. E. J." who writes pleadingly for the little chirper and quotes him as not only eating quantities of the seeds of obnoxious plants but consumes thousands of destructive insects. Quoting him: "I watched them for an hour, hopping under cabbage and cauliflower leaves, beet leaves and celery, picking off the bugs with great zeal and appetite. I saw a bit of a sparrow about as big as a wren, flitting about picking off these loathsome black caterpillars, which infest the vine (Aristolochia, or Dutchman's Pipe). They toured the whole vine and by their destructive march, not only promoted luxuriant growth for that which was in the grip of the enemy, but by so doing provided for the comfort of man," and finishes by questioning, "Are we not justified in classifying them among the friends of man?"

Another Instance

In a neighborhood where this same energetic bird, the sparrow, has been so vigorously cited as destructive to every conceivable thing in the heavens above or on the earth below, drastic efforts were made for its total extermination. Soon the pear trees were found to be dying, with the appearance of having been stung on the topmost branches, and thus on down through the lower limbs. Anxious and most desirous of solving the puzzling question, an investigating committee found the blight was caused from the presence of a small worm. In nearby localities where the furious onslaught on the sparrows had been withheld, the pear trees were found to be in a most thrifty condition. The berated sparrow had been the cause of the salvation, for he too, began at the top and devouring with avidity the little pest, clearly proved himself to be a friend of man. Another interesting item in favor of the little outcast, is worthy of mention. When the weed twigs are stealed or covered with snow, he will willingly partake of them in some sheltered spot. The regularity with which he visits the food stations is noticeable. But when the day comes in which they are able to do their own foraging, the weeds are off and away among the weed-seed harvests, so destructive to man, so palatable to birds.

Unjust Claims

The claim is also advanced that, in their utter selfishness, for their rights, they push other birds to the wall. One pushed other birds to the wall. Authority that here, too, appearances are most deceptive, the sparrow being known to make obeisance to birds as small as the wren, and that with but little alteration. Listen to these appealing lines from Edwin L. Sabin, and then withhold the destructive hand. "He was a bird and he asked nothing more—Just wing room and hopping and chirping galore; A bug and a seed and of water a sip, and a twig or a post where to preen or to chip. . . . Is someone annoyed when he flutters too high? And someone must kill him? But why? Tell me why?" And then in meditation, one recalls in that beautiful book of Luke, "And not one of them is forgotten before God."

My Flock

In winter my feeding-grounds have included customers from the cardinals, the blue jays, the snow birds (red, white and blue), a pet hen pheasant, and ever the brisk-hopping, chirping sparrow, who blinks at me with the twitter, that causes one to interpret its meaning, "I thank you, I thank you."

HOLLYWOOD, ... Routed out of his silence by persistent rumors, Gary Cooper told me something today that should please a lot of his feminine friends.

He has no plans to marry and is not even in love.

The tall star, whose reticence about his reported affairs of the heart has often been mistaken for confirmation, particularly is impatient with those reports linking his name so that of the Countess Di Frasso, he said, "The Countess Di Frasso is already married and, as a good friend of hers, I haven't heard her say a thing about getting a divorce. As a matter of fact, I believe she intends to return to Europe for the latter part of the summer."

Cooper insists that he not only is heart-whole now, but has been for a number of years.

"My career," he says, "is going to keep me busy enough. The next few years will be critical, and it wouldn't be fair to ask a woman to share a life so divided."

Asked when he might consider marriage, the star replied: "Not until the time when I make only two pictures a year, or preferably one."

His eyes crinkled; he gave me one of those sideways glances.

"And of course," he added, "I'll have to find the girl."

It's a gateman gag, but it actually happened and they're getting a great laugh out of it at Universal.

The other day, Claude Rains, newcomer from the stage, was stopped as he tried to drive his car on the lot.

"Who are you?" asked the gateman.

"I'm Claude Rains," the actor explained. "I'm playing out here in 'The Invisible Man'."

The movie St. Peter looked bored. "Oh yeah," he said, "Well, you'll have to make your car invisible too. I can't let you in."

HOLLYWOOD PARADE:

Here's a dramatic short story I ran across in the studios. Several years ago, a Wall Street operator went crash. Once he'd sold a Stock Exchange seat for $750,000 and had had plenty of cash. But the debacle came and he got caught outside the law. They charged him with embezzling. It wasn't an out and out steal but technically he was guilty. They sent him up to Sing Sing.

Some time ago, he came up for parole, but somebody had to sign papers offering to give him a job. The man who did it was one of his victims, Director Lloyd Bacon, who had lost $10,000 in the smash. Today, the one-time mogul is doing extra work in Bacon's pictures. Says Bacon: "Remember Arbuckle? They wouldn't give him a chance to come back."

Yesterday, Lupe Velez was a year older. They were talking of giving her a party. "Party!" says Lupe. "Nobody is going to give me a birthday party until I'm an old woman and can't make whoopee for myself."

Even after Franchot Tonne had had a room specially decorated in blue and white for his mother, she hesitated about coming out to Hollywood to live with him. Determined, Franchot had a set of photographs taken of the room—sent them on to his mother. Now, she's weakening. . . . Still they come, the dance troupes. Colleenette Ballet goes into M-G-M's "Stage Mother."

... Socialite Elizabeth Young often goes to Hollywood parties escorted by her mother. She was the guest of Adolph Zukor at the Coconut Grove. Ricardo Cortez was in the same party, the first time he's been out since his illness.

SYNOPSIS

Attending the premiere of her latest motion picture, beautiful Leni Luneska, the star, is confronted by a shabby, emaciated man, who emerges from the crowd crying, "Leni! It is I, Karl Kruger. Do you want me to tell the whole world?" Leni turns white. She tells the man she will talk with him inside. Lucky Cavanaugh, a gambler, fascinated by Leni's beauty, saunters into the theatre after Kruger. He prevents Kruger from making a scene and has him placed in a private office until after the show. Cavanaugh then bribes an usher to seat him in Leni's box. During the performance Douglas Gates, Leni's elderly escort, proposes to her. She is tempted to accept him to get away from everything. In the office next to Kruger, Leni thieves her robe. The safe, Leni leaves her box and goes to Kruger. He taunts her with, "It is not pleasant to have a starving bum hanging around—not when he happens to be your husband!" He wants recognition as Leni's husband and all that goes with it. She refuses but he says he will wait for her to think it over.

CHAPTER FIVE

With the return of Leni to the box, Cavanaugh lost all interest in the story unfolding on the screen. Gates had moved over to the seat next the rail and was sitting utterly quiet with his head dropped utterly forward.

The fragrance of Leni's perfume preceded her into the box. Without removing her cloak, she sank into the inside chair beside Gates.

Cavanaugh was so close to her that he could easily have reached out and touched her shoulder.

The color had not come back to her face; he sensed the painful beating of her heart. When she leaned toward Gates, Cavanaugh heard her disjunct utterance.

"... If I marry you, . . . no matter what scandal . . . protect me from the whole world?" Douglas . . .

She waited for an answer, but none came. The squariness had left the man's shoulders; he was relaxed and a trifle rounded. His breathing was deep and steady.

"This was the greatest ironic tragedy that ever happened to Leni Luneska."

A man had drowned away in the midst of his woes.

Tears formed in her eyes and one of them glistened on her cheek.

Of the four thousand people in the theatre, slowly Cavanaugh was the only one to see and to understand. Slowly his hand reached forward and grasped one of hers in the darkness. His grip was warm—firm—young.

Leni did not know whose hand had gathered around her own. But something magnetic and strong, something generated in the secret clasp. There was a pressure of palm and fingers which, instinctively, she returned.

"The door behind this box is open," Lucky Cavanaugh leaned forward and said in a low voice. "Let's slip outside and get a breath of air."

And all the while on the screen, Leni Luneska was smiling and laughing. But it was quite a different story in the box. Cavanaugh had made a bold stroke and he knew it would be successful. Leni turned and looked straight into his level, steady eyes. For a moment, each probed the other with unwavering gaze.

"I do not know you," she said—but there was no withdrawal of her hand from his.

"Nevertheless, I know you," returned Cavanaugh with a smile, "and that puts us fifty percent of the way home already."

She was aware of an encouraging vitality in his words. They flowed into her heart like balm.

"I detest these pathetic and appealing roles," Leni stated. "And don't try to protect me."

Almost immediately she ceased to be unstrung.

Like all people who have reached a mountain peak she had virtually expended herself in the effort. Starvation and exhaustion were synonymous and now—the return of Karl Kruger! Life, at last, had succeeded in wringing tears from her.

The strong hand holding her own seemed, at this moment, her only grasp on safety.

"I will go with you," she said.

She made the statement as though she were about to leap off a precipice—as though it were sheer madness.

One of the side doors of the theatre had been opened for ventilation. Cavanaugh, with his hand under Leni Luneska's elbow, stepped out into the feeble light of a concentered areaway between the buildings. The man dressed as an usher lurked near the door and, apparently, paid them no attention.

"Smoke?"

Cavanaugh offered his cigarette case. The flame of his pocket lighter threw a little glow on her smooth white chin. Leni drew eagerly upon the cigarette and immediately her nervousness seemed relieved. He noticed that her teeth were perfectly even and sparkling; that her lips were warm and sensitive.

"Shall we—promenade?" she said, giving him a bright look from which all distress had been erased.

She said it as lightly as though she had not a care in the world.

"We'll do anything you want to do," said Cavanaugh.

He looked down into her clear eyes with a smile. Her head was thrown back a little and she returned his smile with a touch of gaiety. She was unblemished and enchanting. Her soft hair formed a pale golden halo around her face. His common sense told him her smile was a mask—that she was still an actress.

"What I want is quite simple—but impossible," Leni said. "Perhaps you are a miracle-man. Maybe you know a way to make people brave when their hearts are like water?"

"Don't tell me your heart is like water because I won't believe it," said Cavanaugh. "The excitement tonight probably made you a little nervous."

They had strolled along the areaway to the end and were forced to retrace their steps along the sweating concrete. The air was close with the smell of buildings—a dank contradiction of the buoyancy in Cavanaugh's breast.

"How long before you want to go back inside?" he asked abruptly.

"I don't want to go back at all—but I must," said Leni. "All I needed was a cigarette and a breath of air."

But Cavanaugh detected the hollowness in her words.

"You are not going back yet," he told her succinctly. "I wouldn't consider taking you back under a half hour, at least. You are still a very beautiful but groggy young lady."

Leni raised defiant eyebrows.

"I detest these pathetic and appealing roles," she stated. "And don't try to protect me. You are a nice man—but don't spoil it. You caught me off guard for a minute. That does not mean I have placed my life in your hands."

Cavanaugh had heard many people talk with the curdles of aggressiveness in their voices. They had never impressed him as being secure. But he was not certain now whether Leni Luneska was finding her lost poise, or whether she was still acting.

"Whatever made you think I wanted to protect you?" he asked her lightly.

"Don't you?"

"Only against every man—except myself."

"You are like all the others, then?"

"Only more so."

Leni sighed. "I suppose I shall have to put up with you." Her small hand inside his arm pressed slightly. "You're a nice man. I think I shall know you better."

"Positively," Cavanaugh assured her.

Why did you buy this NEWSPAPER?

SUPPOSING that, beginning tomorrow, all the newspapers are discontinued. What a furore the public would make. "News! News! We must have news or we will be no better off than the ancients." All right, suppose we give them news but cut out the advertisements.

Then you would discover that politics, the doings of society, notices of fires, accidents, deaths, scandals, sports, the activities of the police and criminals add little or nothing to the real comfort and happiness of this greatest age in the world's history.

Advertising is the NEWS of all the looms, of all the furnaces, of all the laboratories, of all the shops, of all the stores, of all the world, and all working for you.

Because of advertising, luxuries and necessities that once cost a king's ransom are yours at little prices. Advertising pits merchant against merchant, artisan against artisan, producer against producer, for your benefit, forcing out the best there is in everything and telling the world about it.

wise. Anthony Caine, one year, of Philadelphia, was thought to have swallowed a safety pin, but said pin was later found.

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, July 24—Cornwells won from the Northeast Maroons by the overwhelming score of 12-8 in seven innings, yesterday. Loose playing cost the Jefferson A. C. a victory on St. Ann's field last night as the Columbus Catholic Club, of Richmond, rallied in the closing frames to deadlock the Bristol club at 11 runs each.

Up until the Mules started to make error after error, the visitors had trouble solving the slants of Moose Fry. But when his mates erred, Fry blew up with them and seven runs in the last three innings tied the count.

"Bad" Tulio had three hits in five tries for the Bristol club, having a home run, triple and single to his credit. Luckily for the visiting club that the bases were bare when the circuit crash came in the sixth inning. Scott of the invaders socked a homer in the fifth frame with two on base.

The Depression A. C. was buried under a 9-1 count in an afternoon match on St. Ann's field. The independent champions of Bristol, the Washington A. C., were the victors.

Six runs in the seventh inning sewed up the match for the Washington boys and drove the Depression hurler, Romig, from the hill. He was relieved by Fisher. Seneca and Wilkinson led the winners with the stick while Dietrich and Keller were the losers' best.

The fielding feature of the game was a nice running catch of a line drive by Castor in the fourth inning.

Rappo pitched for the winners and gave the Depression team but seven hits and these were well scattered.

On the Edgely field, Edgely A. C. defeated the Young Italians by the score of 9-6 with Pete Pirce doing the hurrying.

Emilie A. A. with Howard Black and

Ike Watson dividing the mound work, Fisher p 0 0 0 0 0 chained up its seventh straight win, defeating Glen Willow, 11-8.

Bucks County Magician Is Appearing at Atlantic City

Bucks county has an outstanding master magician who is making good in a featured bill this year on an amusement pier in Atlantic City.

He is known throughout the fair circuits of the east by his real name—Raymond Scheetz, which is prefaced by "Professor" for professional purposes only.

For a good many years, Scheetz has been devising tricks for his own use and for fellow artisans, but he still prefers to present performances for children only.

"Only children and the insane cannot be fooled," Scheetz declared at his home. "And there is a new thrill daily in getting the better of the astute young folk," he added. "They are a different audience because you cannot hold their attention completely, nor for long enough periods of time to perform your tricks, and when you do succeed, you feel like the golfer who makes a hole-in-one."

At the present time Scheetz is presenting himself and company at the pier. For a number of years he has been the official announcer at the Doylestown Fair.

During one of Scheetz's performances in a Pennsylvania town, the daughter of the local Methodist minister attended. She decided that she could teach Mr. Scheetz some tricks that were not in his bag and married him to do it. She is now known as Una Maw Scheetz and is her husband's professional partner. Incidentally she lived in Doylestown at one time. She is one of the few women performers known, but, as she points out, it's a natural avocation for a woman.

"Women, you know, are adept at that," she says. "It isn't strange that they can become adept at magic if they want to."

Scheetz started his professional career when he attended a performance of Karl Germain, at one time a professional magician but now a lawyer in Cleveland, O. He stumbled upon the platform to assist Germain by holding two bowls of water which Germain subsequently caused to disappear. Noticing the rapid attention of young Master Scheetz, Germain engaged him in conversation and then showed him a few parlor tricks. He went to his home in New Hope and practiced them by the minute, hour, day and month, then tried them on his pals.

He annexed the daughter of a former Doylestown clergyman to his company as his wife, and their advancement to the ranks of the famous professionally has been speedy.

PHILADELPHIA—(INS)—John Brody didn't know silence is golden—but he's discovered it.

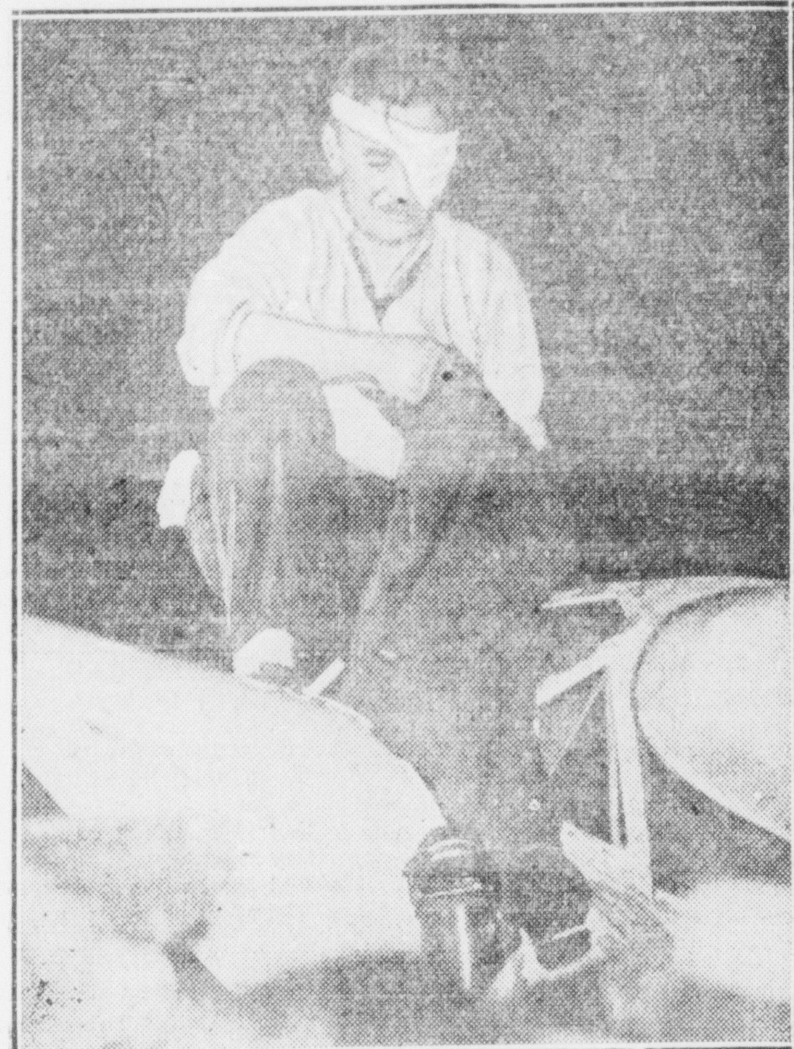

Sentenced to three months on a charge of habitual drunkenness preferred by his wife, Edna, who said she works to support their three children, Brody said: "That's easy."

The magistrate doubled the term and Brody repeated his comment.

"One year," thundered the magistrate. Brody was speechless.

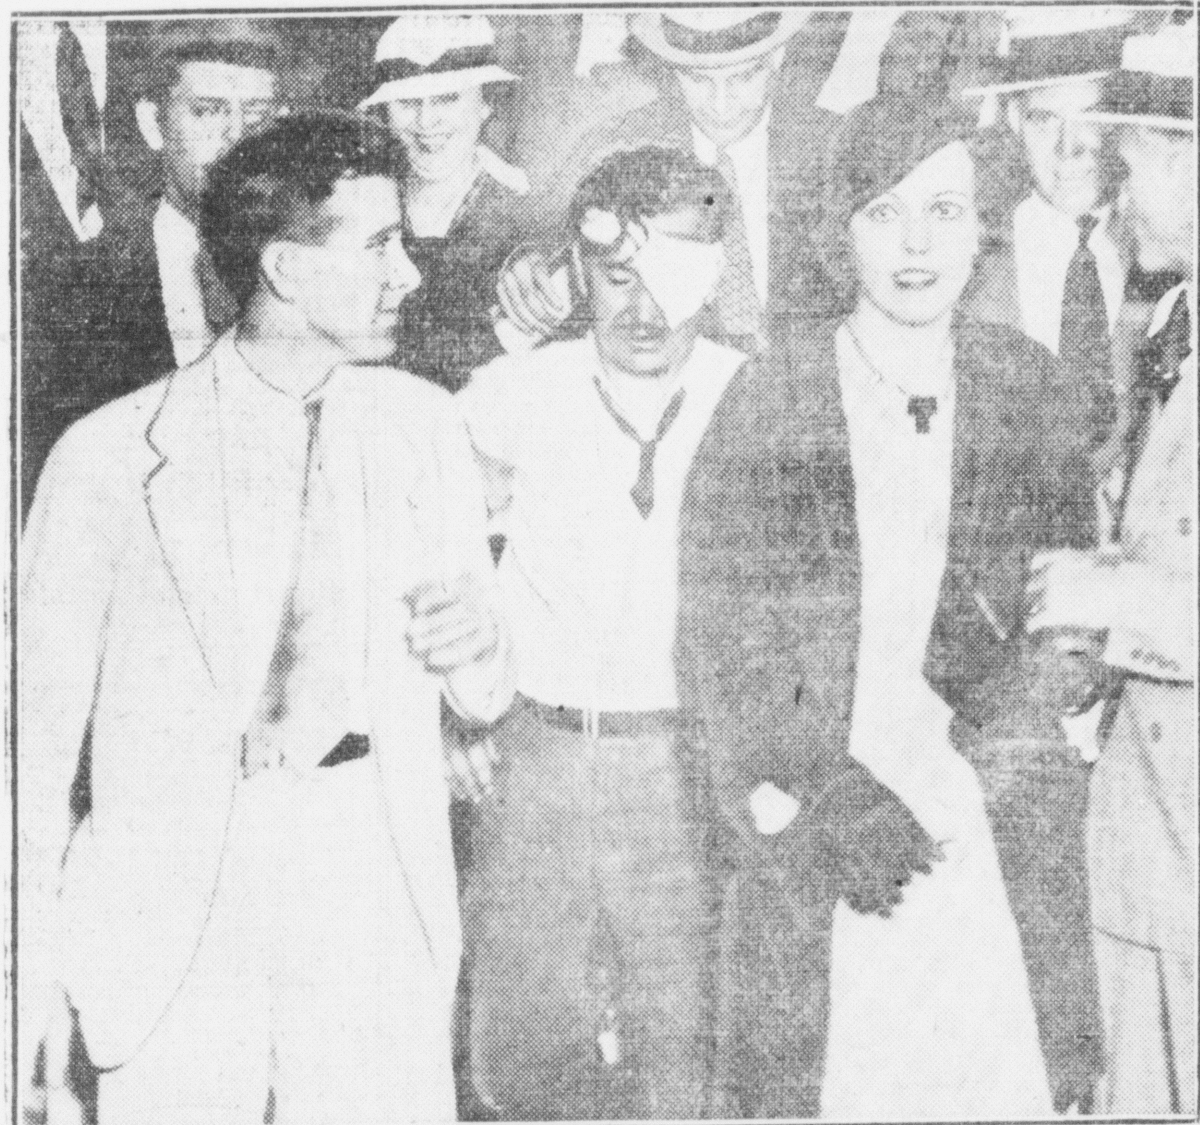

ALLENTOWN—(INS)—Lawrence Waugh, a visitor from Philadelphia, not only escaped possible death but was able to leave his wrecked car unscratched after it plunged through a guard rail and overturned several times as it pounded down a 30-foot embankment.

HOW POST LOOKED AT FLIGHT'S END

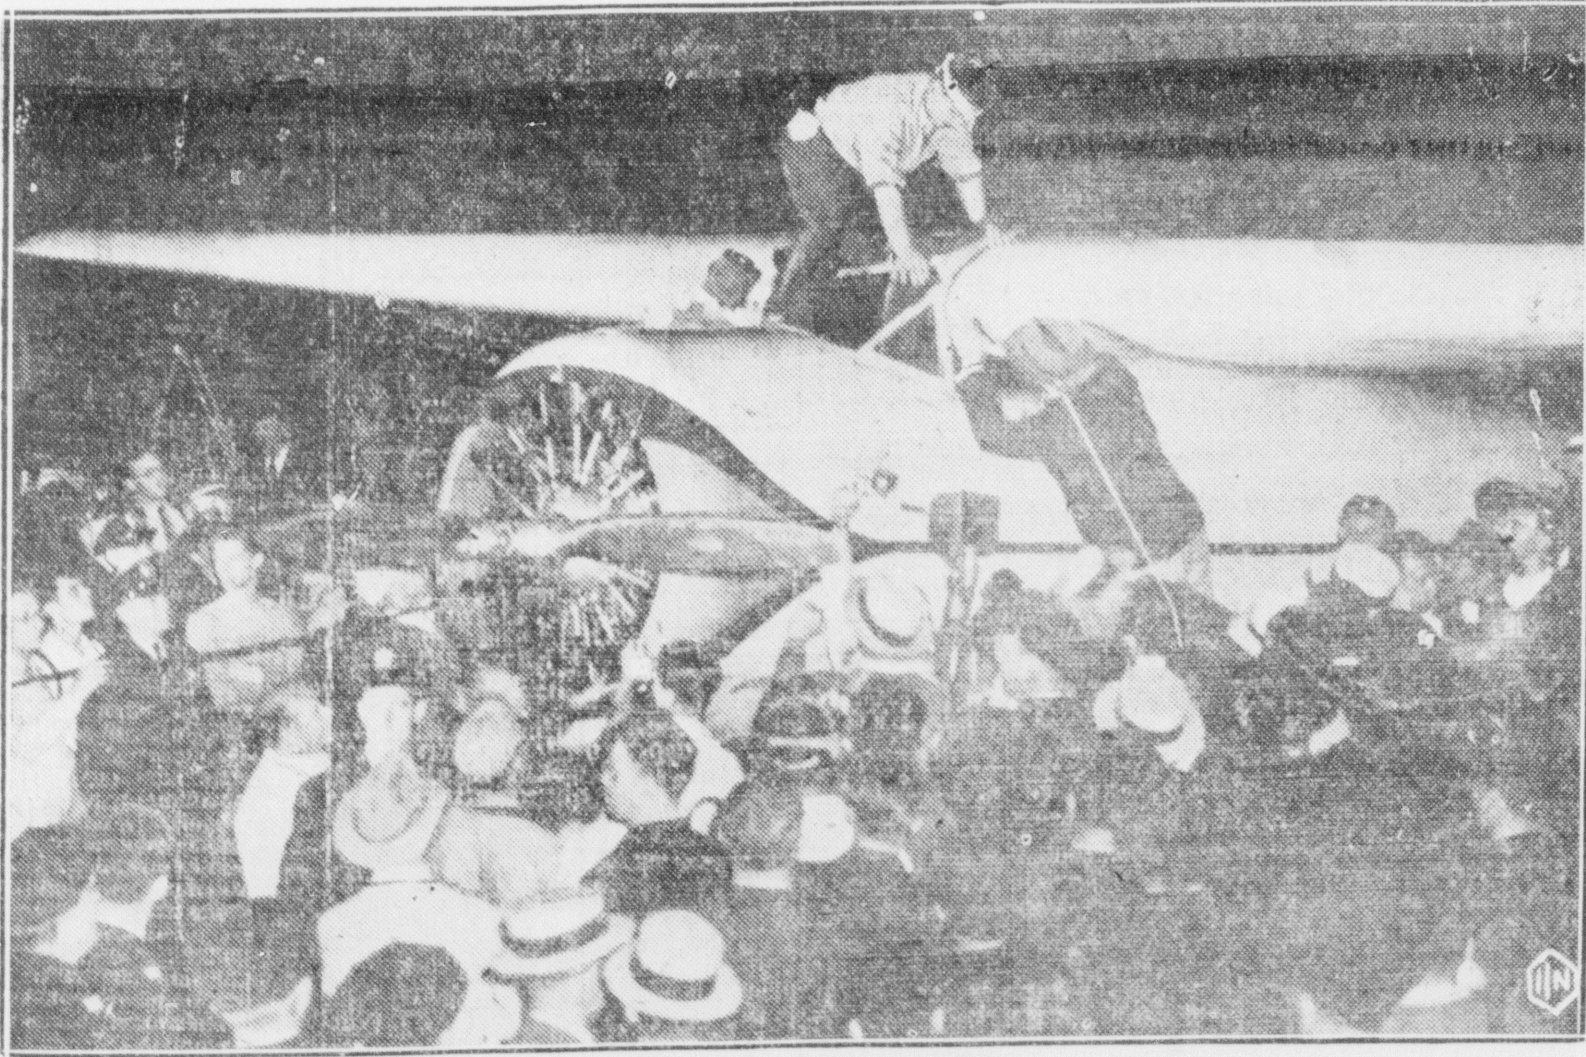

International Illustrated News cameraman fought his way through a howling mob of sightseers to get this close-up of Wiley Post at the conclusion of the Oklahoman's great flight.

GATTY AND MRS. POST IN REUNION WITH WORLD FLIGHT HERO

After congratulating Wiley Post on breaking their record, made in 1931, for flying around the world, Harold Gatty (left) accompanied Mrs. Post and her husband to the hotel where the globe flier went into seclusion to rest up from his grueling eight days in the air. They are seen entering the hotel, surrounded by detectives.

AS POST CONCLUDED HISTORIC AIR ADVENTURE AT NEW YORK

International Illustrated News photo taken for this newspaper a moment after Wiley Post landed at New York, concluding his 8-day-18-hour-49-minute flight around the world, shows the exhausted flier being greeted by his manager. Post was stone deaf after his harrowing experience and could not hear the cheers of the vast throng that had waited for hours to witness the end of his historic adventure in the skies.

WASHINGTON'S BOY PILOT, WHO HOPES TO WIN THE BATTING CROWN AS WELL AS LEADING THE NATS TO A PENNANT.

THE MASTER MIND BEHIND CRONIN

Heinie MANUSH

THIS SLUGGING SENATOR HAS BEEN A FACTOR IN WASHINGTON'S GREAT PENNANT BID.

WHY YOU—G'WAN YOU—!!

YANKS NATS

--IT'S GETTING TO BE LIKE THE OLD CUB-GIANT FEUD!

IN the days not many months ago, when the long winter evenings were used to dole out the chances of the various and sundry big league baseball teams, the experts had us thinking and talking like this: "It's anybody's pennant in the National League, but the Yankees have the American League pennant cinched."

Came the Spring, the little birdies and the baseball season and, sure enough, out stepped the Yankees to make enormous strides in the direction of the pennant. The "I told you so" boys smiled contentedly and failed to allow a high-riding cloud that came from the direction of Washington to trouble them.

But there was thunder with that cloud, and it sounded very much like Joe Cronin, just starting his first season as manager of the Senators, making remarks about the fine team that he was shaping up.

Clark Griffith, owner and mastermind of the Senators, also had something to say, and it was all favorable to the chances of the Senators.

But the experts had their eyes glued on the galloping Yankees, and if they noticed Joe Cronin at all, it was to mention that a manager who tries to play ball and manage a team at the same time has more on his hands than even a good man can handle.

And then came the storm, friends, complete, with lightning, high winds and general battering. The Senators hit a whirlwind pace and blew the Yankees out of their tree-top position. When the Yanks and Senators met in a double-header on Independence Day, both teams knew that a lot was at stake, and there was no fooling. The Senators walloped the Yanks in both engagements.

And so, with the dawn of the fateful day of July 5, the Senators were riding easily atop the American League. And that day is fateful in baseball annals, for it is an ancient idea that the team leading on that date will be the pennant winner. We are not one of those who pin faith to superstitious ideas, but we are also not one of those who disregard such ideas entirely.

What seems well-established is that Joe Cronin has proved that a player-manager who can be a success at both playing and managing is entirely possible; in fact, that such a man exists in his own person. For Cronin, aside from his pennant ambitions, seems headed toward the batting championship of the league.

Let us not forget, though, that Joe's managerial duties are lightened considerably by Griffith. There is an owner who knows his team and his players, and who can definitely be credited with a good many of the smart playing moves exhibited by those very good Senators.
